Trenches were common along the Western Front; they were dug into the ground and the infantry soldiers would position themselves at the front. Further, they would protect them from enemy attacks.

World War Two

In 1940, The Royal Air Force (RAF) defended Great Britain from Luftwaffe (German Air Force) attacks in a campaign called the Battle of Britain. The campaign was fought in the air.

Why do Wars Happen?

Throughout history, wars have occurred for many reasons; in Ancient Roman and Mayan times, it was for territory and wealth, with the Roman army marching through Europe to gain land and an array of natural resources in Britain. During the Wars of the Roses, it was due to a power struggle for the throne of England. In World War Two, war was declared due to the Nazi refusal to leave Poland.
